Refused

If the jury believe from the evidence in this case that Burkeholder, the owner of the automobile in question, is a carrier of passengers and that Frank Dorman was employed by Burkeholder as the driver of said automobile, then the jury cannot find Dorman guilty as charged in the indictment, unless they further believe that he personally transported or had in his personal possession ardent spirits not for the bona fide use of himself or family in excess of one quart.

Report

If the jury believe from the evidence in this case that Barkholder, the owner of the automobile in question, is a carrier of passengers and that Frank Dorman was employed by Barkholder as the driver of said automobile, then the jury cannot find Dorman guilty as charged in the indictment, unless they believe that he was personally responsible for the use of his personal possession of said automobile for the purpose of use of himself or family in excess of one quart.

Refuse D

The jury are instructed that even though they may believe from the evidence that the defendant, Dorman, had in his possession at his home ardent spirits, yet in the absence of evidence that he had the same or other ardent spirits in his possession at some other place they must find him not guilty of having ardent spirits in his possession, being a minor.
